This is possible because FaceRig encodes the audio and video output from your camera and then acts as a virtual webcam which it relays to your video chat.. What exactly is FaceRig you ask? Well, it is a facial recognition program that uses your webcam to track parts of your face which it then maps onto an avatar of your choice to animate it.. Among the possible avatars are monsters, animals, wizards, and a few licensed characters from games (such as Octodad).. The output can be played on Skype, Twitch, and other similar services FaceRig does all of this in real-time letting your avatar move with you as you speak, mapping your voice and gestures.
